

Allegion's reader and credential product offering now included in the Schlage® portfolio

Allegion™ is excited to announce that as of Sept. 25, 2017, the aptiQ® and XceedID® reader and credential portfolios will carry the Schlage® name. The products, part numbers, compatibility and customer service will remain the same. The only difference is everything is now offered under the Schlage portfolio.

Blending mechanical and electronic solutions throughout your commercial, mixed-use, multi-family or institutional facilities is now even easier. From mechanical locks and keys to electronic locks, readers and credentials, Schlage will meet all of your project's access control needs. The goal is to help you deliver the most secure, convenient and efficient solution — with the simplicity of using a single brand.

Why the change?

With this change, Schlage will expand its range of security options under a single, unified brand of access control solutions.

“Allegion has a long legacy of Schlage mechanical keys and locks,” said Jon Mooney, business leader at Allegion. “It make sense that we unite Schlage credentials — our electronic keys — under the same brand as our growing Schlage electronic locking and reader category. Now our keys and locks, both mechanical and electronic, share the same Schlage promise.”

Schlage already has a comprehensive portfolio of mechanical and electronic locking solutions. Incorporating readers into its access control offering will provide additional resources to fit the needs and budgets of any facility. And Schlage is the trusted name for keys and key systems, so including electronic credentials completes that portfolio as well.

What you need to know

- Beginning Sept. 25, all aptiQ and XceedID readers and credentials will be rebranded as Schlage.
- The products, part numbers and compatibility will remain the same.
- With a wider range of security options, Schlage has what you need to specify for any facility.
- This change will help you deliver the most secure, convenience and efficient solutions for your customers, now with the simplicity of a single brand.
